LOCAL MATTERS.

MESTING OF LIFE-MEMBERS OF THE VIRGINIA STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY .- In pursuance of a resolution adopted by the Executive Committee of the Virginia State Agricultural Society, at a meeting held in this city on the 15th day of April, a general meeting of the life-members of the Society was held in the old dining-room of the Exchange Hotel last night.

Among the British settlers who were present were R. J. Farrer, honorable secretary : Peyton Johnston, treasurer; M. M. Blacker, W. J. Clinch, D. Buchanan, Dr. Freeman of the Executive Committee of the British Association of Virginia; F. Harper, Twelve-trees, Farmville; J. Wallis and J. W. Hebdlich, Buckingham; Colonel Scott, Caroline Dr. Anderson Fressenburg, F. C. French, and G. Chaderick, Amelia; J. W. McClure Alexandria; T. J. Bebb, honorable secretary of the Chase City British Society; Major Bolland, England; C. Clay, Esq., Scotland; Captain Cook, Troy, N. Y.; J. A. H. St. Andrew, Chase City; Major-General Barton, Norfolk; and many others.

The meeting was called to order just be-fore 9 o'clock by President Knight, who stated that the object for which the meeting had been called was not such that it would be necessary to have a constitutional quorum. One of the objects, continued Mr. Knight, is winner in 1:55. Lightfoot being second, Du a compliment to the British friends of the galion third, and Hatteraca bad fourth. Society who are present in Richmond at this time to celebrate the birthday of her Majesty Queen Victoria. He also deemed it an opportune moment to renew the pledges of fidelity to the objects of the Society. He could see no just ground why every farmer in the State should not become life-members of the Society, and in this connection he hoped his English friends present would be induced to unite with the Society in fostering and advancing the agricultural interests of the Commonwealth of Virginia. After cordially welcoming the British settlers present, Colonel Knight introduced Professor Pratt, of Washington and Lee University, who, he said, had been invited to address the life-members upon an interesting and important subject to the farmers. Professor Pratt gracefully welcomed the Englishmen whom he saw before him, and then proceeded to address the meeting upon the subject of the philosophical and economi cal use of fertilizers. The former, he said is a manufacturer who must use greater skill than is required in any other branch of manufactory. Of the men who enter into trade and commerce 94 per cent. fail, while those engaged in ordinary manufacturing rarely fail.

The whole subject of fertilizing is confined to the root of the plant, which is entirely under the control of the farmer, and in order to make the best application of the phate of lime, potash, and ammonia he be- Haxall, on Lottie Lee, was aware of it, gave most helpless invalid. To the bed-ridden lieved to be the best commercial fertilizer, him the go-by, possessed himself of the track, and helpless sick this bedstead will be of inimportant matter for the farmer to ascertain what fertilizer his crop needed. The farmer who uses soluble manure will get his money back the first year. Just so much of this soluble fertilizer should be applied yearly as the crop will take away.

The speaker next proceeded to say that since the year 1869 the enterprise of Charleston, S. C., had established four miles from that city seven large acid-chambers-more WANTED, a good COOK, WASHER that city seven large acid-chambers—more than can be found in any other manufacturing city in the United States; more than my 27-1:*

Baltimore or Philadelphia, the greatest man-Baltimore or Philadelphia, the greatest man-WANTED, THREE COMPETENT ufacturing town in the Union, or any other of the great manufacturing cities in the United States. The speaker cited an instance of a farmer in England (Mr. Dixon) who in one year, recently, used twelve thousand dollars' worth of commercial fertilizers-soluble fertilizers.

What would a Virginia farmer think of spending $12,000 in fertilizers in one year? Mr. Dixon, who published this statement, afterwards bought $17,000 worth. Do you suppose he would have spent all this money unless he got it back?

Mr. Pratt next made a statistical statement of the increase in the quantity of commercial fertilizers manufactured and sold, to show that it is to the interest of the farmer to use them-that it pays, and that the farmer will, in the end, be suitably rewarded. He thought that the farmer in buying commercial fertilizers, should know first what he wants and why he wants it; what he buys and the price he pays for it. If good fertilizers are purchased it will pay the farmer

At the conclusion of Professor Pratt's remarks Major R. W. N. Noland offered a resolution of thanks to the distinguished gentleman for his very able and interesting lecture, and requested a copy for publication Adopted.

Mr. J. A. H. St. Andrew, on behalf of the British settlers present, thanked the members of the Society for the invitation extended to them, and assured the Society that it culcated by the settlers.

Several gentlemen explained that they had been led to believe that this meeting was intended to be a convention of the farmers of the State. The resolution under which the meeting vas called was read to settle the question. Mr. Hebditch, one of the British settlers present, who had been in the State for five ears, thanked the Society for the kind invitation to meet the Society, and urged the enabling the farmers to raise sheep, and thus improve the impoverished land in the State.

Another Englishman said that he thought that if each farmer would provide himself mainder of the week: with strychnine, many of these worthless curs might be gotten rid of. Major Noland: Yes, sir; carry a box of strychnine pills in his pocket; give one to the dog, and one to every other politician, and the good effects will be seen in a short time. [Laughter.] Mr. Hebditch presented the following, which was agreed to: Resolved, That this Society, at the request of the numerous and important body of British settlers in this State, desire to urge upon the Legislature of this State the necessity of passing a law imposing a tax upon dogs to protect the interest of sheep-farming, to which branch of agriculture the English settlers of Virginia think the State peculiarly adapted, and to which many of them are now turning their attention with great earnestness and at great expense. Adjourned at 11:20. JEFFERSON WARD RALLY .- The Old Dominion Club of Jefferson Ward will to-
